WINTER'S ENTERTAINMENTS.

Manager J. M. Osborn, of the Opera House, returned from New York Tuesday, where he made arrangements for a number of attractions for the coming season.

Thus far not many actual bookings have been made, but negotiations are under way for some first class performances, especially during the months of January and February, which are considered the best months of the year for theatergoers.

The first troupe to hold down the boards will be the Aiden Benedict Company in "Wormwood." This will be the 25th of November.

Gorton's Minstrels, who are old time favorites will be along January 30, and later on Richard & Pringles' Minstrels will serve to fill the house.

Another great attraction will be "Tatum," a gentleman on the order of Boone, who drew such crowds here last winter, but "Tatum" out booms Boone. Later "David Harum" will probably be put on.

The management expects to have an opera company, and some of Charles Frohman's successful comedies, as well as "Quincy Adams Sawyer," one of the most successful of the New England plays.

A number of others are being negotiated for, among them "The New Clown," and "The Chinese Honeymoon," two of the most popular plays now running in New York.
